GERMAN ENVOYS RETURN

Intimation is That Reply Has Been Framed to the Peace Terms of the Allies Treaty With Austria Will Be Ready by Next Wednesday, Belief.

By Associated Press.

Germany's chief peace plenipotentiaries are back at Versailles today after an important consultation held yesterday at Spa with Premier Schiedemann and other representatives of the German home government. It had been expected in advance from Berlin that the framing of Germany's counter proposals to the Allied peace terms was to be considered at the Spa conference and it seems probable that the final form of these proposals now has been decided upon. Germany must present the proposals within the week's extension of time for replying recently granted her which expires on Thursday next.

The military terms of the document, it is understood, will provide that Austria's great army in 1914, second only to that of Germany's, be reduced to a mere handful of 15,000 men. All implements of war in the hands of the Austrians are to be destroyed and the further manufacture of munitions is to be forbidden. The naval terms published in part some time ago swept away the whole Austrian navy.

VERSAILLES, May 24.—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau and the other members of the German peace delegation who went to Spa on Thursday, returned here this morning with the exception of Dr. Theodor Melchior, the financial expert. All the members of the party were smiling and seemed in good spirits. The delegation alighted from the train at the Noisy-le-Roi station and entered automobiles for Versailles.

PARIS, May 24.—The council of four today continued its consideration of the economic clauses of the Austrian peace treaty, calling in experts for consultation. It is still expected that the treaty will be ready for presentation to the Austrians on Wednesday next.

HEARTY WELCOME AWAITS VALIANT FIGHTERS OF THE 110TH ON THEIR ARRIVAL

Come in Groups on Trains and Trolley Cars and the Public is Kept on Jump to Get Sight of Them; Band Out but No Parade.

HOME AND FRIENDS FIRST IN THE MINDS OF EVERY ONE OF THEM

Connellsville's own fighting heroes, the soldiers of Company D and the Medical Detachment, arrived in the city this morning, or at least a majority of them did, discharged finally as units in the 110th Infantry, 28th Division.

Some of the boys came in on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 7, shortly after 3 o'clock; more followed on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 9, due here at 7:10 o'clock, and still more came on the Pennsylvania train arriving here at 8:02 o'clock. Others who traveled as far as Greensburg on the Pennsylvania lines came from Greensburg on the street cars.

Train No. 7 brought 11 wearers of the scarlet keystone back to the city, and 38 more arrived on No. 9. A half dozen more came in on the Pennsylvania. Others came in scattering groups.

All of the local members of Company D are home with the exception of Sergeant C. F. Moore, Mechanic A. F. Turner, and Private Elmer Camper. The first two men were expected to come via Greensburg over the Pennsylvania. Private Camper is in a hospital in Philadelphia and will not be home for 10 days or two weeks yet.

Light members of Company D, two of the Medical Detachment and one of the band arrived home this morning shortly after 3 o'clock on train No. 7. These men got into Philadelphia in the afternoon and were able to catch the train which left there at 3 o'clock. When seen at Cumberland everyone of the boys was wide awake and counting the miles between them and Connellsville.

The Company D men on the early train were H. A. Miller, William Mullen, Oskey D. Stines, Evans L. Barnhart, Robert Ketter, Thomas Diller, and Lawrence Mansberry, all of Connellsville, and Abe McManus of Uniontown. The hospital men were Tweed Stafford and George McCormick. Hugh Mulac of the 110th Regiment band, was the other member of the party.

Edgar Horner, another member of the band, stopped off for a visit with his sister, Eleanor, in Washington, D. C.

George Minnis, Walter Rogers, Charles McCormick, V. Bert Ritchie, and William Martray, all of this city, and members of the Medical Detachment arrived in the city at 11 o'clock from Greensburg. "Jimmie" Darr went to New York, the boys said, and Dewey Miller will spend a few days at Cumberland. Oliver P. Moser is still to come home.

Among those arriving on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 9 were: Sergeant Ray Benford, South Connellsville; Cook William Bowtys, First Class Private W. G. Younklin, Sergeant W. D. Younklin, Sergeant Walter Smith, Cook Julius P. Firechow, First Class Private William Stillwagon, Private Lloyd Detwiler, Private Frank Freeman, Sergeant William H. Bisel, Private Edgar W. Powell, Private John Cunoo, Private William Struble, Private Walter S. Butler, First Class Private John E. Kaufman, Private Cornell D. Santmyer, all of Connellsville; Sergeant Daniel Robinson, First Class Private Edwin H. Sincock, Sergeant Smith Fuller, Sergeant Elmer Wilson, Sergeant Alfred W. Davis, First Class Private Frank Zaccovic, Sergeant Thomas Taylor, Private Leo E. Woods, Private Ainsley, First Class Private Ed. J. Brady, Corporal Ralph A. Silbaugh, Corporal Charles A. Hunt, Corporal Ray Johns and Private Zeke Shaw, all of Uniontown; Private Herman J. Carr, Private William W. Hardy, Private Alva D. Gray, Musician Wilson Foltz, all of Dunbar; Private Long of Carmichaels; Sergeant George Gillingham, Roscoe; First Class Private John Ramage and Private Frank E. Beatty of Fairchance, and Sergeant Walter Bailey of Scottdale. Corporal William E. Morris, Masonstown; and Ralph Rude of Connellsville, members of the Headquarters Company, arrived on the Pennsylvania train at 8:02 o'clock.

Tony Renocks of Wheeler, a member of the Machine Gun company, traveled on the street car from Greensburg. Tony has entirely recovered from the effects of gas.

James Decker, a member of the 110th Infantry band, arrived in the city this morning on the 10:30 o'clock street car. Wilfred M. Cable, another member of the band, has been home for several days, being called here on account of the illness of his mother.

The hometown bound soldiers were met at Cumberland by a representative of The Courier, who completed the trip to Connellsville with them on Train No. 8. The men on Train No. 7 were seen as they passed through Cumberland. Through The Courier the fire department was notified of the time of the arrival of the soldiers.

The boys were in high spirits over their discharge, and although tired from loss of sleep by remaining up two nights previous to their departure from Camp Dix to celebrate the occasion of their leaving, many of them remained awake throughout the entire trip, and as though by magic, everyone forgot his weariness in the wonderful happiness of being able to realize he was once again back home.

On train No. 9 coming to Connellsville the 38 soldiers of the 110th units were scattered throughout two coaches. Some groups played cards, others talked and dozed by spells and still others could not help but "cut up." Civilian passengers on the train were kept awake by their amusing antics.

"All change at the next stop for Pea Ridge, Everson and other mountain points," was a cry the soldiers would sing out; time and again, "Pea Ridge" is a nickname for Dunbar. "Where are we now?" one leather-junged Yankee questioned. "Two hours from home," was the ready reply.

"Oh—! it can't be the truth," the happy boy-soldier exclaimed. Another member of the company who wore a wound stripe said: "I thought when I went away I would be all excited when the time came to return home. Now it just seems a matter of course, although I can hardly realize this train is really taking me back to Connellsville."

Another, when asked what it felt like to be home again, gave his impression in one word, "sleep."

Thus it was throughout the train. The doughboys who struck terror into the hearts of the Hun, demonstrated they could still joke and play. And they did. The only damper to their hilarity was when the rain began. The veterans didn't like the idea of returning to the city in a rainstorm. They still had the unpleasant memory of having to leave for Camp Hancock in one, and were hoping for better weather on their return.

One of the chief questions asked was "what kind of weather are you having in Connellsville?"

Of all the 38 men on the train only eight had berths, and they remained in them until Indian Creek was reached. Then there was a big scramble to get dressed before the train reached Connellsville.

The soldiers crowded the steps of the coaches as the train drew into the station and were greeted with cheers and personal messages called out by the hundreds waiting for their arrival. The soldiers returned the cheers with a vim, shouting "Who said we wouldn't come back?" "Who said we couldn't do it?"

The Connellsville Military band was waiting and struck up a breezy selection. The crowds shouted cheer after cheer, whistles blew and everyone vied with the others to get forward and grasp the hand of a hero of the 110th.

When the boys were supplied with copies of The Courier on the train at Cumberland and saw where the band was to be out and a large delegation

The Yough river rose during the night from 6.50 feet to 7.20 feet.

Despite the unfavorable weather many persons took in "A Trip Around the World," given last night by the I. H. N. class of the First Methodist Episcopal church. The program was immensely popular and the crowd was used in conveying the crowd to and from the different points included in the trip. The first stop, "France," was made at the home of Mrs. Alva B. Pierson in Merrill avenue, Greenwood, where fruit and wafers were served. From there the guests were driven to the home of Mrs. E. C. Moore in Lincoln avenue, where appointments in keeping with Ireland were suitably carried out. The committee appeared in quaint Irish costumes. Delicious sandwiches and salad were served. The home of Mrs. Frank W. Wright in Vill's road, where Japanese appointments prevailed, was the third stop. Here the decorations were unusually attractive. Mrs. Stanley P. Ashe, who had charge of the tickets and Mrs. C. E. Carson, who was in charge of the wonderful display of Japanese curios, appeared in handsome Japanese kimono. The curios, all belonging to Mrs. Wright, included handsome lacquer, "Japany China," Egyptian beads, etc. Refreshments consisting of tea and wafers were served. The last stop, "America," was made at the home of Mrs. J. A. McGraw in East Crawford avenue. Patriotic appointments were artistically carried out, with flags forming the decorations. Music was rendered by a male quartet. The committee wore red, white and blue paper caps. Ice cream and cake were served.

Large and successful was the "Victory Follies," given last night at the armory by the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks. About one hundred couples, including a number of out of town guests, attended. The hours were from 8:30 to 2 o'clock and during that time the spacious auditorium presented a gay and happy scene. Music was furnished by Kiefer's eight piece orchestra. Moonlight and other dance novelties were introduced. The dance was well appointed, not the slightest detail being overlooked by the committee composed of H. E. Blocker, E. L. Martin, R. H. McClintock, S. C. Shetz, F. A. Port, P. A. Hueckel and C. R. Goodwin. The hall was attractively decorated for the occasion.

Following their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Golden, who eloped to Cumberland this week, will be at home at the Burnace, Dunbar. The bride previous to her marriage was a teacher in the Dunbar township schools. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Black of the Furnace.

Rist, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rist of Poplar Grove, solemnized Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the parsonage of the United Brethren church in Lincoln avenue. Rev. J. S. Showers, the pastor, officiated.

A delightful surprise party was tendered Miss Lona Showman Tuesday evening when about 30 of her friends assembled at her home in North Prospect street. Music and various games were played and later in the evening luncheon was served. Miss Showman was presented with a number of handsome and useful gifts. The out of town guests were Ray Clydes, Ben Mack and Albert Whaley of Evansport.

A special meeting of the I. H. N. class of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be held Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. H. W. Lessig in East Crawford avenue.

Military appointments will prevail at the invitation dance to be given by a committee of non-commissioned officers of Company G, Third Infantry, Pennsylvania, Regt. 11th, Monday evening in the armory. Elaborate decorations have been planned and the armory Monday night will be at its prettiest, and the decorations will be not only attractive but unique. The patriotic element will be dominant and the dance will be a "military ball" in the real sense of the word. Many features are provided for, among them moonlight waltzes during which a spotlight will be flashed on the dancers. Miss Lena Fryer of Pittsburgh, a prominent vocalist in city musical circles, will sing. Kiefer's six piece jazz orchestra will provide a program of the very latest dance numbers. The hours are from 8:30 to 12. Everything points to the dance being one of the most interesting and successful of the season. The committee in charge is composed of Sergeants Alonzo M. Krepps, Harry Rodgers, John Moore and James A. List; Corporals Robert Springer, Howard Moore, Ben Younklin, E. R. Keasler and Victor Messley.

BOYS OF COMPANY D AND MEDICAL DETACHMENT HOME

fire whistle would be blown a half hour before the time for the arrival of the troops.

Fire Chief DeBolt was notified at 2:15 o'clock this morning that the largest number of men would arrive on No. 9 and shortly after 8 o'clock the "wildcat" was sounded. The whistle was out of order and its message did not carry very well. It was said it was not heard on the South Side.

Home-coming greetings were something which the boys couldn't dodge and although there was no parade, the soldiers appreciated the fact all the more. They were glad their friends met them at the station, and were more than glad when they found they could go directly to their homes without having to march up the streets.

Walter Schrover, a member of Company D, whose home was here when he enlisted, left the train at Cumberland, near which place he now lives. Schrover had been a German prisoner of war for many weeks and was officially reported as killed in action. While fighting on the Vesle he was struck by a bullet in the lung. Falling, he called to the others to go on without bothering for him. It was believed he was mortally wounded, but his body was never located.

Schrover, however, regained consciousness after lying for some time and getting up he wandered about aimlessly, trying to find the lines. Unaware he walked into German territory and was made a prisoner.

The members of his company did not know he was alive until after the armistice was signed and he returned from Germany.

Sergeant Smith ("Tish") Fuller and Sergeant Alfred ("Goat") Davis, both of Uniontown, have been given the regimental citation for their gallant conduct in action. During the fighting on the Vesle, when the company lost all its officers, Fuller took charge and was rewarded for his conduct on the field.

"Goat" Davis received his citation for his action at Verennes where he disposed of 15 Germans.

The soldiers of the company contend that if Company D had ever come out of an engagement with an officer in its ranks so that an official report could have been sent in, the entire company would have been cited for its conduct in action. With the exception of Sergt. Hill, however, the company always lost its officers, either killed or wounded. D Company was an important unit of the 119th Infantry which up to November 4 never failed to take an objective and hold it, and its part in the heavy fighting resulted in proportionately heavy losses. There are very few men among the survivors who do not wear one or two wound chevrons on their right coat sleeves.

After the arrival of train No. 9 on the Baltimore & Ohio, the word was passed around the city that the remaining members of Company D and the Medical Detachment would arrive at 8:02 o'clock on the Pennsylvania. The platform of that station was crowded when the train pulled in, and though it brought several local boys home, there was not nearly the number which had been expected. Rousing cheers were given as the train rolled into the station. On board were a large number of men of the 119th going to their homes in Uniontown and other places south of here.

SENIOR NOTES.

(By Chas. Sheetz)

Practice for the Seniors' annual class play and class day exercises are progressing very rapidly and things are being whipped in shape for the big production.

Edward:—"Say, Theresa, since every company in the Army has a mascot why doesn't the Class of 1919 have one?"

Theresa:—"Why, Edward, you must be like Rip Van Winkle, sleeping all the time. Don't you know Louis Plazoli (the smallest boy in the Senior class) is the mascot of our class."

Miss Armstrong would like to receive a few more class songs written by members in the Senior class. So get busy, Seniors.

The other night at class play practice "Joe" McConnell in one of his entrances came in and turned his back to the audience. Miss Baker said, "Now, Joe, that will never do." "I guess I have too many backs to be in this Miss Baker," replied Joe.

We are using all our energies to get through our examinations and to prepare a good commencement program. The Tiger may suffer in the meantime but we promise to make it up to everyone commencement week.

SOPHOMORES.

(By Ruth Clark)

Examination time is not far off, only three more weeks. They seem longer than usual to the students for with the nice warm weather comes the thought of taking long walks and going on picnics.

A great many have the "Spring fever" and do not like to study and are therefore dropping back in their subjects. A great many also wish they were Seniors and are very envious because the Seniors only have one more week.

The Seniors are the Sophomores' best friends and the Sophomores regret their parting greatly. But with our thought of parting comes a thought of the future when we shall be "dignified" Seniors and envied by our undergraduate friends.

Edward Dick was fixing a dainty bouquet of violets for some one (?) Luella put her hand out in an effort to get some but Edward stopped her with—"Aw, Duck!"

"No," exclaimed the indignant Luella. "I'm a chicken!"

Mary:—"Oh, look! Francis has socks on."

Melvin:—"That's nothing, I have too."

Nell Davis:—"Dear me, did you hear the latest? Princess Elizabeth of England is engaged to a common officer of the English army."

Leona Baer:—"Humph, my man must have a college education."

Miss Lyons:—"What did the German constitution consist of?"

Melvin Hoover:—"Nothing but a bun Kaiser."

Sophomore class song to tune of Ja-Da:

Sophomores, Sophomores you're the only class for me,
Sophomores, Sophomores you're the only class for me,
Don't you know by '21,
We'll have every class on the run?
So, Sophomores, Sophomores you're the only class for me.

Notice:
A mystery is solved: Harmon Blue is accounted for. The other day in biology he informed us that brain, instead of being in folds and of a grayish hue, was ruffled and red.

Who are they?
She is chubby and square
And she doesn't much care
What kind of marks she gets,
She has dark curly hair
Her complexion is fair;
And a tiny Sophomore is she.

She's a medium-sized girl
With curly hair
She's not as serious
As she ought to be
Because "as you like it"
Is her motto.

She's an athlete by name
Basketball is her game.
And by it she won fame.
Her hair is an auburn hue,
She's as sweet looking as the dew,
She's a pretty Sophomore.

Certainly you must know this one:
He is tall and lissome
Some times is quite contrary
But a smile from Clotilda
Will make him merry;
He's a good looking Sophomore.

We will make this the last,
Describe a merry little lass.
She is as dainty as small,
She's pretty, is no stall.
Joking is her hobby,
She's not a bit snobby,
She has dark curly hair,
She's a cute little Sophomore.

EDITORIAL.

With less than a week of actual school work before them the Senior class of 19 is becoming aware more each day that it is soon going to graduate.

In many of the Senior minds, and in a way we might say, all of the Senior minds there rested a vague idea of what a graduation is like and how it is conducted, though at the same time it was always looked upon as something far in the future and an event they had always hoped to take a part in sometime in their lives. Coming with the seeming rush that it has and swooping down upon the unsuspecting Seniors of the class of 19 it has partly dazed quite a few. Graduation time in many schools is a large event but in C. H. S. it seems to have a deeper meaning than just an event. Naturally graduation days are looked upon by all students as one of the big events of their lives, a time in which to be more than joyful and happy.

But to the Seniors who are "undergoing the ordeal," as they quote it, it has a far deeper and broader outlook.

With the thought that the next year will probably see them scattered over various parts of the country and with the possibility that they will never be assembled together again, they then realize what it is to have an alma mater and to be able to look back upon days such as they are now spending in the high school.

Beside the thought we have just spoken of, they are also subject to another reminiscence. That is, the fact that they have accomplished something. And indeed can it not be called an accomplishment to have attended a school such as C. H. S. and after a four years vigil with studies that at times seem distracting and useless, be made aware of the fact that they are now competent to enter any higher institution of learning with ease or take up commercial work of almost any nature and be more proficient at it than the greater majority of those individuals who did not attend a high school.

It is without a doubt an accomplishment and there are few, if any, who will not agree with us when we say that the Seniors of the class of 19 can well be proud of the work they have accomplished, and the interest they are taking in their graduation day.

An event of unusual interest to parents of school children is the annual exhibit of the drawing, domestic art and manual training departments of the Connelville public school which was on display at the high school yesterday and is being repeated today. The exhibit received quite a lot of favorable comment by those who viewed it last night and this afternoon.

It is with great pleasure and a modest amount of pride that the Tiger announces the winning of the German helmet by the Connelville High School. The helmet is a trophy given by the government to the school having the largest percentage of Victory Liberty bonds reported through the school. The percentage of bonds reported by students of C. H. S. was 71 per cent which is almost twice the amount reported by the Uniontown high school which was also competing with Connelville. The bond percentages were computed not on the value of the bonds but on the number of them. A hundred dollar bond counted for no more than a fifty dollar bond. Of the 71 per cent reported through High School, between 25 and 30 per cent of this amount were bought by the students. You are to be congratulated students for your fine work in the recent drive and you can be assured that the government considers the Connelville High School more patriotic than ever.

pigeons and scare-crows.

Miss Van Buskirk:—"You didn't have a very good lesson today, Wilson."

Wilson McClaren:—"I had a good lesson but you asked me a question I didn't know."

Miss Van Buskirk in current events class:—"What about the Saare valley?"

Paul Behanna:—"That's where they are going to—ah—"

Robert Carpenter:—"—grow pickles."

To "Billie" MacPhail:
Billie danced when she was two,
As buttercups and daffodils do;
Spirited, frail, naively bold,
Her hair a ruffled crest of gold,
And whenever she spoke her voice
Went singing,
Like water up from a fountain springing.

But now her step is quiet and slow;
She walks the way the primroses go;
Her hair is yellow instead of gilt,
Her voice is losing its lovely lilt,
And in place of her wild delightful ways
A quaint precision rules her days.

JUNIOR NOTES.

(By Earl Lucius)

Now that the school term is coming to a close there is no reason why you should lose interest in handing in notes for the Tiger, but "should" hand in more than ever. The Junior column has been a success and we do not want to fall down in the last three or four editions. Wake up and hand in every note that will pass the censor. Now is the chance for those who have never contributed anything for the benefit of the Tiger to become contributors and prove to the Seniors that we can carry on this work next year in which they themselves have been very successful.

Miss Baker:—"Answer the following questions."

Molly Schuler:—"Shall we write what we think?"

Miss Baker:—"Why, certainly and don't write what someone else thinks."

The Cicero classes have been very much relieved since they have the secret of how to prepare their translation. The secret: The matter of getting enough English words to take place of Latin words.

Bill Allen:—"I know Macbeth's speech."

Miss Baker:—"Let's hear it."

Bill recited it without missing a word. Miss Baker looked at the board and saw to her surprise that Bill had very cleverly written the speech under the heading of a geometry proposition.

Sadie Kooser:—"Miss Delta, how do you say chewing gum in Latin?"

Miss Delta:—"Why, they didn't have such disgraceful things then."

All of the Juniors would like to know Rodger Lininger's latest song. It goes:—

Oh! Florence,

On the girls, girls, girls

We dance with 'em,

We prance with 'em

Through many mad whirls.

We pray for 'em,

We dock 'em with pearls

Oh the girls, girls, wonderful girls.

sentence):—"The rain descended and the floods came. Now, William, which of the two parts of this sentence is the stronger?"

William Cecil:—"Well, I believe the first is because you can't have a flood until the rain descends."

MEN of the Iron Division! The path of your triumphal march in Philadelphia led past the great building at Broad & Carpenter Streets, which houses the Kirschbaum shops. Modern—sun-flooded—the most advanced clothes-making institution in Philadelphia; and many authorities would say, in the whole United States. From those shops came more uniforms for American army officers than from any other clothes making house—hundreds of them worn by the splendid officers of your own Iron Division. From those same shops have come these fine Spring clothes—all the smart styles young men are wearing this season. You could not all have Kirschbaum tailoring in your uniforms. You can have it in your citizen clothes—and at moderate prices.

It radiated "home" in a measure all out of proportion to its size. The daughter of the house had chosen its own little apartment because of its sunny bay window.

"Thanks to the National Biscuit Company and the other packers of good things," said the girl, "I can live well without a kitchen."

A thick, warm-toned rug invited one to lounge on the floor, while the big fringed cushions scattered about gave evidence of the coziness of the room.

The measure now goes to the President and its approval will make the delayed May 1 allotment immediately payable and also will provide funds for the June 1 allotment.

BIG ORDERS FOR STEEL RAILS ARE PLACED BY U. S.

Railroad Administration Divides Awards Among Six Companies.

UNDER HINES' PROTEST

Price is $47 a ton, which is exactly What Was Agreed, by the Manufacturers and the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, May 24.—Orders for 350,000 tons of open-hearth rails have been placed by the Railroad Administration, with the steel companies which in response for a request for bids, quoted uniformly a price based on the agreement between the steel interests and the recently dissolved industrial board of the Department of Commerce.
Director General Hines, whose refusal to abide by the agreement was an influential factor in the dissolution of the industrial board, in announcing the orders last night said they were placed "under protest" and with the "emphatic disapproval of the prices and the manner in which they were established."

The price submitted by all of the bidders was announced by Director Hines as $47 a ton, which is the exact price agreed upon for such rails by the steel manufacturers and the industrial board. The companies submitting bids were Carnegie Steel company, Illinois Steel company, Tennessee Coal & Iron company, Colorado
Fuel & Iron company, Bethlehem Steel company and Lackawanna Steel company.

Director General Hines in his statement announcing the bids, charged that the action of the six steel companies in submitting uniform bids was taken under the leadership of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. Hines then reviewed figures showing, he said, the "heavy profits" of the steel companies in recent years in support of his contention that the rail prices quoted were unreasonable.
"It is important to remember," said Mr. Hines in conclusion, "that the present policy of the steel interests in adhering to high prices on the ground that present costs necessitate them, is a policy that does not work both ways. It is a policy to keep prices from going lower as business increases and costs diminish."

Tire Rotation

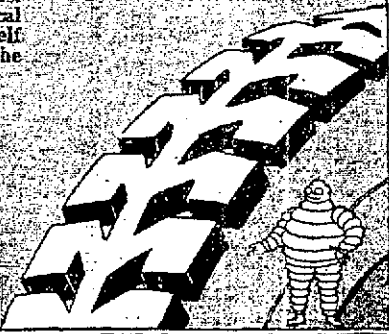

Do the tires you are using make you to apply this principle which will save tire bills by 20%?

Tire rotation is practicable only when fully interchangeable tires like Michelin Universal Tread Casings are used on both front and rear wheels.

Many non-skids, while perhaps satisfactory on the rear wheels, cannot be used to advantage in front because their small sharp projections make steering difficult. Recognizing this fault, many tire manufacturers are now recommending smooth tread "driving tires" for front wheel equipment.

Michelin Universals are equally satisfactory for all four wheels because of their broad, flat treads.
Use Michelin and secure all the economical advantages of tire rotation. Protect yourself against dangerous front skids and obviate the necessity of carrying two types of spares.

"THE WOMAN ON THE INDEX"—
Adapted by William Mack from George Broadhurst's stage success of the current season, affording Pauline Frederick an excellent role, is being shown today. This is a wonderful story with a plot so baffling that the climax is guaranteed to keep the most sophisticated spectator guessing until the very last scene. Every scene pulsates with suspense. When Miss Frederick, as the heroine, happily married to a diplomat, is introduced to a friend of her husband she imagines that all is lost. This man she recognizes as a former detective. Now he is chief of the secret service. At once she knows he will reveal to her husband the fact that she is "the woman on the index," that her name appears on the police records. But he does nothing of the kind. He is truly her friend. He only asks that she encourage the attention of a "distinguished foreigner" who is suspected of a connection with a threatened Bolshevik movement. The woman must carry on an intrigue with him, must deceive her husband

CHAPTER I.

An Error Rectified.

Pedro, the mestizo, having lighted the wax tapers in the massive candlesticks, having placed bottle and glasses upon the great mahogany table, tobacco and papers upon the small mahogany table, withdrew silently, as was his way, swiftly, as was his training.

His old master, Señor don Antonio de la Guerra, looking at genuinely antique in his old-fashioned black coat, small, high-heeled boots and curled white hair and mustache as any article of the antique furniture in the vast drawing room of the hacienda, turned his lively black eyes upon his guest.

"You will forgive the rudeness of an old man, Señor Dempton," he said softly, his English perfect; his utterance still the honeyed speech of Castile, "but may I ask you to understand that I know nothing of what you Americans call business? And that I have no wish to learn? That is why I place these matters in the hands of an attorney." He bowed after the way of the old school, and ended, smiling, "In the hands of a thoroughly competent attorney, señor."

"Dempton, a little man with a restless, nervous manner and eyes like a rat's, shifted in his chair, cleared his throat and thanked his patron, looking pleased on the whole.

"This is a very important matter, Mr. de la Guerra," he offered, a trifle hesitantly and with keen eyes upon his host.

"To be sure," the old man cut in impatiently, though with no lessening of the courtesy of his speech. "A will is always important."

He leaned forward, poured himself a glass of the red southern wine, lifted it so that the still candle flames shone in it brightly, and drank slowly.

Already Dempton had been asked to drink, as he was always asked when he came to the Rancho de la Guerra; already he had refused, as he always refused.

The old man set down his glass and took tobacco and fine white paper from the tray upon the smaller table, his steady, slim white hands making the cigarette swiftly.

"You say, Señor Dempton," he said when he had lighted a paper lighter at the nearest candlestick, "that you have found a flaw in the original will?"

"Yes, sir," Dempton spoke hurriedly and ran on very much after the manner of a schoolboy who has gotten his lesson by heart and wants to "say" it before he forgets.

"Only a small matter, a technical error, which might never be noticed. And yet there is a risk—there is a danger that the will might eventually be set aside; because of it that your desires might come to naught; to a word, that the Señora Teresa, whom you wish to make your sole legatee, might never come into the fortune you have willed to her. I have thought it best, sir, to draw up a new document."

"You have done so?" inquired the old Señalard, his eyes musingly upon the thin wisp of smoke from the cigarette.

"Yes," Dempton slipped a red hand into his breast pocket. "If you will read it and sign it, sir—if we can get the matter settled right away, destroying the original documents."

"The details, Señor Dempton, I trust I may leave with you," De la Guerra waved a white hand gracefully. "You have attended to my business for me for seventeen years now, and I have never found cause for criticism."

"You do not even care to have me go into detail concerning the flaw which I alluded to creep in?"

Dempton had leaned forward a little in his chair, his eager eyes upon the other's. De la Guerra laughed softly and shook his head.

"You would force me to appear stupid," he put his hand upon the bell cord hanging from the edge of the big table and a bell tinkled from beyond the door. "Let me have the papers you wish me to sign."

Pedro brought pen and ink, retreated upon another errand, and once more returned, bringing with him two of the other servants about the great adobe house to witness the signature.

The old man looked at the new will carefully and signed carefully, signing merely if the will were in all essentials the same as the original one.

The servants withdrew with their master's thanks and loose silver, and De la Guerra, returning to Dempton one copy of the paper, which was intended after his death to dispose of the hacienda, a great range, heavily stocked and an indefinite sum in gold and silver, folded the other and placed it upon the shining table top.

"I shall read it tomorrow," he said lightly. "You know that I do not read after the candles are lighted, señor."

Dempton, his errand done, was already upon his feet, his eyes roving from the hat which Pedro had taken from him a few minutes ago.

"But," cried De la Guerra, "you are not going back tonight, señor? Surely you would not think of putting my hospitality so to shame! You must spend the night with us."

Dempton's eye had found his hat and he speedily crossed the room to take it up.

"Thank you, Mr. de la Guerra," he said.

"Thank you, Mr. de la Guerra," he said.

"Thank you, Mr. de la Guerra," he said.

"Thank you, Mr. de la Guerra," he said.

old man, leaving Pedro to close the door after him, had gone back to his chair and wine and cigarettes.

"Los Americanos," he muttered when he was alone again, "they are all alike. You cannot trust them. That Dempton has the eyes of a rat, the face of a liar, the manner of a convict. Americans on the one hand, Mexicans on the other! Sangre de Dios! I must take Teresa away from them, Pedro!"

"Si, señor."

"Where is the señorita?"

"In her room, I think, señor."

"Buena. Convey to her my affectionate compliments, and tell her that I shall be for the half-hour adding a certain note to my American memoirs. After that I shall be pleased if she will come to me."

"Si, señor." Swift and silent, Pedro went upon his errand.

Señor don Antonio de la Guerra, pushing the will to one side, drew a thick manuscript from the table drawer, and, writing in a fine, scholarly hand, began to add certain highly insulting commentaries to the chapter dealing with the vitriolic description of the character of "Los Americanos."

(The book he planned to print in Spain.)

Meantime the Señora Teresa de la Guerra, his demure granddaughter, was not in her room but upon her little rose-twined balcony, and the moonlight, bright about her, was not more bright than the laughing eyes she turned downward toward the adoring face of an American!

WOLF A WILD DOG

Declares Game Commis. Jener, Men May See Them, But None Here.

HARRISBURG, May 23.—Notwithstanding the stories that come from Westmoreland county about wolves that have been shot there, Dr. Joseph Kalbfus secretary of the State Game Commission, says that there are no wolves in the state, and that the "wolf" shot was really a wild dog. Kalbfus wants the skill of the "wolf" sent him for inspection. He said today:

"There are no wolves in this state. If the more announcement of President Wilson that bears and vines are coming back has the effect the game commission cannot be held responsible. Men may see a wolf but there are none just the same."
